Opportunities

Underrepresented in Medicine Leadership through Scholarship Fellowship, by Society of Teachers of Family Medicine

The new Leadership Through Scholarship Fellowship offered by STFM offers training and mentorship for early-career underrepresented in medicine (URM) minority faculty with a focus on developing scholarly writing skills for academic advancement and leadership.

Fellows will benefit from a yearlong curriculum tailored for URM faculty and deep mentorship relationships to:

- Develop a personalized leadership and career roadmap
- Learn to recognize, navigate, and overcome the minority tax
- Create a research question tailored to their specific academic responsibilities and interests
- Identify opportunities for scholarship both within and without their institution
- Write and submit at least one manuscript with the coaching and co-authorship of faculty and peer mentors

Applications are due 5/24/2021

Be sure to check with your department chair prior to applying to assess if funding is possible.

Harvard Business Review Women at Work Podcast: We Deserve Better Than “Attagirl”

Both male and female managers tend to give women low-quality feedback. And when we don't hear how we're really doing at work and what we can do to improve — and men do — we're put at a disadvantage. We talk about how to get high-quality feedback that is direct, specific, and focused on behavior we can change. Guests: Robin Ely and Ella Bell Smith.

FISSS 2021 Virtual Conference

The Center for the Advancement of Teaching, the Faculty Senate, and the Office of the Provost are excited to invite you to FIU's 5th Annual Faculty Innovations for Student Success Showcase on Thursday, March 11, 2021 from noon to 5 p.m. The virtual Showcase will recognize all of the excellent work our faculty do to promote student learning and success and to provide an opportunity for faculty to share their work and learn from one another.

Keynote Address

Ours is Not a Caravan of Despair: Trauma-Informed Teaching for Restorative Justice

In this session, we will consider the neuroscience of toxic stress and its impact on learning. We will examine the principles and practice examples of trauma-informed approaches, whether it's in the classroom or at the institution. Finally we will reflect on the connections between trauma-informed teaching and restorative justice.

Mays Imad is a neuroscientist and professor of pathophysiology and biomedical ethics at Pima Community College, the founding coordinator of the Teaching and Learning Center, and a Gardner Institute Fellow. Dr. Imad's current research focuses on stress, self-awareness, advocacy, and classroom community, and how these relate to cognition, metacognition, and ultimately, student learning and success. Through her teaching and research, she seeks to provide her students with transformative opportunities that are grounded in the aesthetics of learning, truth-seeking, justice, and self-realization.

THURSDAY, MARCH 11
3:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.
